Module Description

Listening

The module prepares candidates to deal with actual situations in the study-abroad contexts that require accurate hearing of English. It deals with four sections - social situations, a single speaker in a non-academic situation, multiple speakers in a non-academic situation and a single speaker in an academic situation.

Speaking

The module aims to develop various aspects of spoken English of candidates such as fluency, the ability to communicate effectively, candidates' willingness to expand on answers, being able to generate a thoughtful answer to a question, and to communicate it clearly with good organization of ideas, strong spoken grammar and flexible spoken vocabulary.

Academic Reading

The Academic Reading Module consists of three sections including content at undergraduate and graduate level, taken from academic sources such as books, newspapers and magazines. Section one has general academic content, section two deals with logical argument, and section three deals with diagrams, graphs and illustrations.

Academic Writing

The Academic Writing Module aims to develop the following skills in students- interpreting, describing, or comparing information presented in graphic form - a diagram, bar chart, line graph, pie chart or table and writing an essay on a general academic topic in a formal style.
